From December 11 to December 13, 2020, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1263 likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is ±2.8 percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

[1] The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) took action this week against Facebook, accusing the technology company of engaging in anti-competitive practice. The suit centered on Facebook's pattern of buying up competitors such as Instagram and WhatsApp, limiting the amount of market competition the company would face.
Do you support or oppose the FTC's action against Facebook?

[2] President-elect Joe Biden recently decided not to give cabinet positions to Roger Ferguson, a member of Google's corporate board, or Michelle Flournoy, who has close past professional ties to Google and its former CEO Eric Schmidt. Do you support Biden's decisions not to have given them positions?

[3] The Federal Trade Commission and Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice control whether or not the government will take action against companies, such as large tech companies, when they engage in anti-competitive activity. When thinking about how President-elect Joe Biden should appoint to these agencies, which statement comes closer to your view, even if neither is exactly right?

He should appoint people who haven't worked previously for large tech companies and who commit to be tough in holding them accountable for any wrongdoing.	50	42	50	58	51	49	44	53	50	49	45	40	50
He should appoint people who have experience working for successful companies like Facebook, Apple, and Amazon, because they will bring valuable experience from the private sector to the government.	35	44	33	26	32	39	42	31	31	41	31	42	35
